Museum of London

Pillar of Deco period

2004 saw Savekers join in a celebration of the Art Deco period by designing, manufacturing and supplying more than 100 items to the Museum of London for its flagship 1920's exhibition, 'The 1920's – The Decade that Changed London'.

Amongst the portfolio of items supplied - each manufactured in polished chrome - spanning both bespoke and standard product, was caption holders used to name the exhibits, a support structure to hold oil paintings of 'glamorous women' of the period, free-standing round tables and a pedestrian guidance system incorporating the company's Art Deco square pillar. The 'process' extended to both product design in consultation with the Museum, through to the production of prototypes of the bespoke items for approval.

Exhibits included glamorous outfits and dresses from the 1920's, as well as political posters and examples of material from Bovril and Guinness as being representative of the beginning of marketing in the UK.
