University of Nottingham

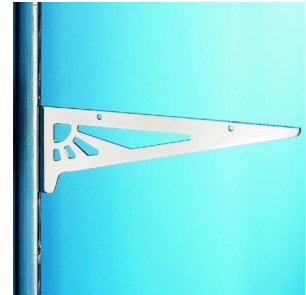

A degree of storage for top University

Savekers supplied the University of Nottingham with a range of shelving systems designed and manufactured to meet the top university's specific design and functionality requirements.

The Jubilee Campus of the University of Nottingham, which was opened in 1999 by Her Majesty the Queen, houses three Halls of Residence, a Library and five Teaching Buildings including the Business School.

Savekers supplied more than 4000 shelf brackets, originally specified by the Campus architect, for use in Teaching Buildings and lecturers and professors' teaching rooms.

All items were manufactured and supplied in batches to meet the University's evolving requirements. Savekers originally produced samples from drawings supplied by the University, which had to be approved both for suitability of design and practicality prior to Savekers proceeding to full manufacture. The shelving systems were finished in a grey Epoxy powder coating, specified by the University and supplied as a colour sample for approval before application.
